Main Page
Community portal
Recent changes
Random page
Help

Tools
What links here
Related changes
Special pages
Printable version
Permanent link
Page information

Gargoyles (TV series)

Gargoyles is a World Class Company animated television series. Two seasons of the show (totalling 65 episodes) were aired as part of the Disney Afternoon programming block between October 24th, 1994 and May 15th, 1996. (A third season, rebranded as The Goliath Chronicles and broadcast on ABC, aired from September 17th, 1995 to February 15th, 1997, but this season is not considered canonical.) In 1995, Touchstone Pictures expressed interest in developing a live-action Gargoyles film.

The series differed from other Disney series in its level of maturity and the darker tone of the program. It drew much inspiration from world folklore, notably the works of William Shakespeare, legends of King Arthur, and Norse mythology.

From 1995 to 1997, the series was nominated for eleven Annie Awards, winning one for Best Achievement in Storyboarding for the episode, "Reawakening". [1][2][3][4] It was also nominated for two daytime Emmys in 1996. [5][6]

Contents [hide]

1 Opening titles
2 Characters
3 History
  3.1 The Comedy Development
  3.2 "The Gargoyle" - Shifting to Drama
4 Memos
  4.1 Comedy development
  4.2 The Gargoyle
  4.3 Gargoyles
5 Continuation
6 Merchandise
7 See Also

Opening titles

During the opening title sequence of Gargoyles, clips from the show (many of them from the five-part pilot episode, "Awakening") are set to an instrumental score by Carl Johnson. During the second season, in order to familiarize new viewers with the show's backstory, Keith David (the voice of Goliath) provided a voice-over that played over the theme tune.

One thousand years ago, superstition and the sword ruled. It was a time of darkness. It was a world of fear. A world that prayed over the flame tore.
Stone by day, warriors by night, we were betrayed by the humans we had sworn to protect--frozen in stone by a magic spell for a thousand years.
Now here in Manhattan, the spell is broken and we live again!
We are defenders of the night. We are Gargoyles!

Characters

There are a number of recurring characters in the series from the leads to less than one-shot characters. One character who persisted through many versions of the comedy development was Morgan, the gargoyles' human friend, Morgan's day job went from museum curator to inventor to elementary school teacher. She was tasked with teaching the gargoyles about the modern world and keeping them out of trouble. When the show was reimagined with more of a dramatic focus, Morgan stayed around, eventually became a detective, and was renamed Elisa Maza. The name Morgan was then given to Goliath's love interest.

On the villains side, the gargoyles' main foe was Xanatar, a guy with very few morals and lots of inherited wealth. Xanar is also a descendant of an ancient sorcerer named "Sidero". "Xanar of Sidero" was the name of the comedy development villain. Xanar's sidekick was Dracon, a dragon. Dracon was renamed "Xanatos" for the dramatic version. Xanar, evolved into David Xanatos. Owen was promoted from snivelling aardvark to Xanatos' right hand man and the epitome of "straight man". Aspects of the villainous sorcerer were later used for the Magus and the Archmage (and the idea of an ancestral war was used in "Vendetta").

The gargoyles themselves went through a lot of alterations. Early documents from the comedy development suggest as many as twelve possible gargoyles, though the number was quickly thinned down to a more manageable cast size. As the comedy treatment progressed, some of the gargoyles began to resemble the gargoyles we know today. A character called Gargoyle briefly roamed the early documents before his traits were distributed to the clan leader. She was described as a female Indiana Jones with a weakness for ice cream and a mortal fear of pigeons. Later, she was renamed "Dakota" (and swapped the ice cream for Chinese food). Finally, she became an overambitious bad apple and the only gargoyle to side with Xanatos. Her name was changed to Zahnja, Lexington's love interest.

Back when Gargoyle was more the power behind the throne than the actual leader, the gargoyles followed a gargoyle named Nick. Nick was good at coming up with plans, but not so much at coming up with plans that actually worked, leaving Gargoyle to save the gargoyles' tails. Nick was also highly interested in the ladies, though his interests were seldom returned. Frustrated by the safety of the clan, Nick was demoted to the rank and position of the gargoyle known as "Trouble". Later dubbed "Brentwood" by the public and human attitude, he resumed the position of leader when Gargoyle became Demona and turned to the dark side. His leadership abilities didn't improve much though, he's described as having a "seventies-era, 'sensitivism'" Fortunately, he was replaced by Lexington, who was less lost. Andy was an obvious early incarnation of Brooklyn, though he apparently bore more physical resemblance to Lexington. The name Andy would eventually be used as well.

During Nick's brief stint as leader, there were two gargoyles named Cambell and Lessie. Cambell was fascinated by everything modern and Lessie was easily distracted and prone to misunderstandings. Cambell was renamed Hudson and became the clan's resident expert on technology. Lessie had a little of Cambell's love of all things modern sewing to modern weaponry, but nowhere near Hudson's level of skill. Lessie was renamed "Dakota" (and swapped the ice cream for Chinese food). Finally, she became an overambitious bad apple and the only gargoyle to side with Xanatos. Her name was changed to Zahnja, Lexington's love interest.

Also among Nick's crew were a pair of gargoyle sisters: Pen Dora and Isa Dora. Isa Dora had a large girth, a love of song and dance combined with a talent for neither, and a generally sweet and friendly personality. The first memo to mention Isa Dora also refers to a possible alternate male version of her. Around the same time that Gargoyle became Dakota, Isa Dora was renamed "Cocoa", the gargoyle her personality was the most similar to. Cocoa was based on the 1991 song "Cocoa Butter Kisses" performed by Salt-N-Pepa. The leader and Demona turning evil - "Coco" was still present and still much the same: a gargoyle with the heart of a dancer and "the grace of a rhinoceros." With a change of gender and some additional refinements, Coco eventually became Broadway.

Rounding out the cast of recurring gargoyles was Ralph. Originally named "Ralph Fullmoon" and paired with "Alice Fullmoon" in an obvious nod to The Honeymooners, Ralph just couldn't catch a break. Everything he tried to do ended up backfiring on him. Of all the gargoyles, he was the least happy about being awake again. In later passes, Ralph lost his last name and went from Hudson's sidekick to a gargoyle who was good at nothing. Ralph's lack of talents was a running gag in the first season, but it is not clear whether or not the comfort of the hobbies. The other gargoyles would come to him for advice or to catch up on the latest soap opera happenings. When the show became a drama, Ralph became Hudson.

The final pitch for the Gargoyles comedy series was written in September of 1991. It was submitted and rejected shortly thereafter, paving the way for a reimagining of the series as a dramatic action-adventure show.

"The Gargoyle" - Shifting to Drama

After the Disney executives passed on the comedy version of Gargoyles, Greg Weisman went to Disney TV producer Ted Stones for advice. Mr. Stones suggested revamping the series into a more straight-up action-adventure show with a single gargoyle protagonist, borrowing some themes from Disney's successful Aladdin TV series. Greg took the advice to heart. He wrote a new pitch for the show, "The Gargoyle", which was almost completely reworked and retitled The Gargoyle. In this version, the titular gargoyle was magically created by an evil wizard to help him stalk the castle of a particular princess. The gargoyle, who had no memory of his past, was tasked with protecting her. But then, like a change of heart, he is taken with the princess and her ideals and resolves to help her battle the evil wizard. But as the sun rises, the gargoyle turns to stone, a condition of the wizard's spell he didn't know about. When he awakens the next night, he finds the castle ransacked. The princess is gone, possibly dead. Even his creator is nowhere to be found. The gargoyle is alone.

Being a creation of magic, the gargoyle is immortal. He remains at the castle crumbling, only making occasional forays into the wider world to steal books or sometimes fight evil (e.g. battling alongside the RAF in the Battle of Britain). But he never connects with another person and always returns to the castle. Years pass. Centuries pass. Then one night, he finds a new human who is different. He's a scientist who's busy at work in the castle. The gargoyle is about to learn that he's been repairing the castle while he slept. He finds more and more of the castle restored each night. Then one day, the castle and the gargoyle are moved across the ocean to the top of a New York skyscraper belonging to wealthy businessman Xavier. It's in this strange new world that the gargoyle makes his first new human friend: an idealistic young pluralchemic detective. She helps him find a purpose in life, protecting the city from evil.

Memos

Comedy development

- 115. A real fossile... [7] - The earliest file on the series, dated 3/11/91. (Reprint: 297.)
- 116. Another fable! [8] - 3/12/91. (Reprint: 298.)
- 299. Today's lunch meeting... [9] - A memo written before 3/20/91 by an associate (perhaps Kel Fair), about the comedy development. The modern human ally is described as a "nerd female" and she is a scientist working for the main villain, referred to as "evil 3piece/ex-mager".
- 300. Early comedy development... [10] - Notes from a Development Staff Meeting 3/20/91, again probably written by Kel Fair. For the first time, gargs turn to stone while sleeping. The modern human's name is mentioned: Elisa Maza. The backstory for the villain's sorcerer ancestor is noted here. For the first time, the villains are Nephew (pre-Xavier), Sorcerer (pre-Xanatos), Dracon (pre-Brooklyn/Lex, nesterlists Nick but demoted to second-in-command), Isa Dora (pre-Coco/Broadway), Pen Dora (no equivalent), Lessie (pre-Les/Beast), Ralph (pre-Hudson). Three human characters are also mentioned: Elisa, Prof. Fred Schaefer (who has a somewhat ineffectual, Morgan-like role), and Nephew's henchman, who is probably the first mention of the idea for villains for him to combat.
- 301. FIRST BLUSH COMEDY GARGS! [11] - 4/5/91. A list of 9 gargoyle characters for the early comedy development with bios, compiled by Kel Fair and Cindy Chupack: Nick, Gargoyle (Nick's sidekick), Cambell (Hudson), Lessie (Les), Isa Dora (Coco/Broadway), Pen Dora (Ralph/Hudson), Gargoyle (Dakota/Demona), Trouble and Lessie. Nick was similar to Brooklyn, although he more resembled Lex. Isa Dora shared characteristics with both Cambell and Lessie. Trouble and Lessie were both considered as sidekicks to the evil Nephew.
- 302. More comedy characterizations... [12] - 4/18/91. A refined list of characters, reduced from 9 to 8 gargoyles. Georgette (pre-Dakota/Demona, now the leader), Trouble (pre-Brooklyn/Lex, resembles Nick but demoted to second-in-command), Isa Dora (pre-Coco/Broadway), Pen Dora (no equivalent), Lessie (pre-Les/Beast), Ralph (pre-Hudson). Three human characters are also mentioned: Elisa, Prof. Fred Schaefer, and Nephew's henchman, who is probably the first mention of the idea for villains for him to combat.
- 301. FIRST BLUSH COMEDY GARGS! [11] - 4/5/91. A list of 9 gargoyle characters for the early comedy development with bios, compiled by Kel Fair and Cindy Chupack: Nick, Gargoyle (Nick's sidekick), Cambell (Hudson), Lessie (Les), Isa Dora (Coco/Broadway), Pen Dora (Ralph/Hudson), Gargoyle (Dakota/Demona), Trouble and Lessie. Nick was similar to Brooklyn, although he more resembled Lex. Isa Dora shared characteristics with both Cambell and Lessie. Trouble and Lessie were both considered as sidekicks to the evil Nephew.
- 302. More comedy characterizations... [12] - 4/18/91. A refined list of characters, reduced from 9 to 8 gargoyles. Georgette (pre-Dakota/Demona, now the leader), Trouble (pre-Brooklyn/Lex, resembles Nick but demoted to second-in-command), Isa Dora (pre-Coco/Broadway), Pen Dora (no equivalent), Lessie (pre-Les/Beast), Ralph (pre-Hudson). Three human characters are also mentioned: Elisa, Prof. Fred Schaefer, and Nephew's henchman, who is probably the first mention of the idea for villains for him to combat.
- 303. Enter Owen -- The Aardvark! [13] - 5/8/91. Xavier's sidekick Owen is introduced for the first time, as an aardvark. Owen has a crush on Morgan. Morgan is slightly different but still a carbon of Elisa. Nephew's name is changed to Xanar. Xanar's sidekick is Dracon.
- 306. Interns again... [14] - Two memos written by interns Hoyland Ricks and Regina Dixon, with ideas for episodes of the comedy series, written 7/3/91. One of Regina Dixon's episodes mentions that Morgan is a teacher, but still with an interest in archeology.
- 307. Morgan and Hoyle! [15] - A memo written by Hoyland Ricks. Morgan is now an engineer/inventor and former employee of Xavier who resents him for stealing her inventions. Owen is now Mr Owen and still has a crush on Morgan. Xavier's sorcerer ancestor is not mentioned, and Xavier himself seems more competent.
- 308. Gotham Gateways to... [16] - Two memos written by Kel Fair, dated 7/8/91. Morgan is now an engineer/inventor, however Hoyle is still an inventor, but rather than merely being Xavier's former employee, she is now his former partner on equal footing. She has a helicopter. The new leader seems to be Morgan herself, although Amy is the focus in other memos. Owen is now Fred Jones, the gargoyles are now Scooby-Doo. The gargoyle's name is Gargoyle (Dakota/Demona). The castle is described as having been in the Bronx for a century. They were put to sleep not by a magic spell (again). Sidero is not mentioned but by irate villagers who drugged them. They wake up when the castle is literally dropped into place. Dakota is now Demona, and Gargoyle is the name of the gargoyles who quickly sided with Xavier upon waking. The notion of protecting appears for the first time, although Amy/Hoyle doesn't like the idea of gargoyles protecting anyone but themselves. Nephew is mentioned briefly.
- 309. THE LOST CAUSE DIAMOND (and other stories...) [17] - A dateless, nameless memo from approximately September 1991. Morgan is affiliated with a museum again, but Xavier/Xanatos is not. Owen/Owl is a "Cousin" of Xanatos/Xavier. Morgan's ex-boyfriend is named Jeff. Amy still looks like Les, but is far more like Brooklyn. Coco (spelled that way at the first time) is now much like Broadway, and is described as a "female John Belushi". Xavier's main motivation is attaining immortality. DeMona is spelled with a capital M in the middle. Xavier's henchman are named "muscular 3-piece suits" (the origin of both the Goon Squad and the Steel Clan).
- 311. Another trip to the drawing board... [18] - 11/14/91. The backstory (before and after 1000 year sleep) is reworked, and written up by Fred Schaefer and (possibly) Kat Fair. Both Xavier and Morgan have been 10th century practitioners of the gargoyle arts, both of whom are described as good and which is evil. In Kat Fair's memo, the ancestors are known as Morgan and Xavier, although Fred Schaefer's memo mentions Xavier's ancestor as Sidero.) In one of two potential 10th century backstories, the gargoyles' main job is protecting people. In the other possible 10th century backstory, the gargoyles are from a small town outside Paris. For the first time, modern-day Morgan is a police officer, actually the Police Chief. The modern-day gargoyles are described as a group (Amy) for the first time are introduced. Although Xavier's ancestor appears in the backstory, Xavier (spelled "Xavier" in Fred Schaefer's memo) works alone as a villain in modern day. While sleeping for 1000 years, the gargoyles are intentionally positioned to "look scared" by Xavier's ancestor. Dawn is mentioned for the first time, as the name of the 10th century villain's spouse.
- 312. Gargoyles protect... [19] - 11/20/91. A document by Kat Fair pulling the threads together. A handwritten note by Greg says that gargoyles are protectors that are treated like dogs. Again, Morgan and Xavier have ancestors in the 10th century gargoyles, both of whom are good. Xavier's ancestor is a time sorcerer. Demona is mentioned for the first time, as the name of the Evil Wizard Morgan. The gargoyles are put to sleep either by a spell (by Morgan) or by a magic drug/potion. Again, the gargoyles are intentionally placed on the castle.

The Gargoyle

- 313. The paradigm shift... [20] - (reprinted from 117. More...) [21] - After the previous document (312), the comedy development was pitched to executives and rejected. On the advice of Ted Stones, Greg Weisman developed a new pitch, "The Gargoyle", which was a single gargoyle protagonist. The gargoyle is taken from Beauty and the Beast. Summary of a meeting 12/19/91, this is the earliest file on the dramatic version, now called The Gargoyle. The 10th century backstory is "in barbaric Briton [sic]". The evil wizard (no name given) sets up with an apprentice/student (no name given). The wizard's castle is in the Bronx. The wizard's name, also not given, is an inventor, but rather than merely being Xavier's former employee, she is now his former partner on equal footing. She has a helicopter. The new leader seems to be Morgan herself, although Amy is the focus in other memos. Owen is now Fred Jones. The gargoyle's name is Gargoyle (Dakota/Demona). The castle is described as having been in the Bronx for a century. They were put to sleep not by a magic spell (again). Sidero is not mentioned but by irate villagers who drugged them. They wake up when the castle is literally dropped into place. Dakota is now Demona, and Gargoyle is the name of the gargoyles who quickly sided with Xavier upon waking. The notion of protecting appears for the first time, although Amy/Hoyle doesn't like the idea of gargoyles protecting anyone but themselves. Nephew is mentioned briefly.
- 314. Interesting ideas here... [22] - 1/15/92. A note from Fred Schaefer to Greg Weisman, with ideas for episodes of the comedy series, written 7/3/91. One of Regina Dixon's episodes mentions that Morgan is a teacher, but still with an interest in archeology.
- 315. And now THE GARGOYLE! [23] - 1/17/92. A pitch breakdown for the new development. The show is described as "gothic melodrama in a very modern setting". The Evil Wizard, Princess, Gargoyle, Xavier (described as new and menacing) and modern heroine (again suggested to be a police detective) are the only characters that appear. Suggestion is made that the modern heroine and the princess could use the same art model, and that Xavier and the evil wizard could be related. Suggestion is made that the Gargoyle might have in Xavier's tower, guilty over what he's done to Princess. Suggestion is made that Princess is a child. During the 1000 year intermission, the Gargoyle might steal books from the library, or make occasional forays out into the world (e.g. to fight in WW2 - ripping the wings off a German plane).
- 316. Villain-wise... [24] - 1/9/92. Fred Schaefer compiles Greg Weisman's suggestions for dramatic villains. Notably, a werewolf is mentioned as an example of a "horror-based" villain.
- 317. More on villains... [25] - 1/9/92. Another note from Fred Schaefer on villains, this time including Xavier and the Evil Wizard. Xavier is described as a "very big, muscular man" in a three-piece suit, as well as "a self-styled Renaissance man". The Evil Wizard is described as "a mad scientist".
- 318. My guru speaks... [26] - 1/10/92. Tad Stones' feedback on the latest pitch breakdown (presumably document 315). Comments suggest that the backstory was set in the time of King Arthur, although that may have been for budgetary reasons. Suggestion is made that Xavier's ancestor is Merlin. Merlin is described with evoking the Gargoyle to protect the castle/princess from being by a (separate) evil wizard. Notable suggestions include: focusing more on the romance between the Gargoyle and his human ally, avoiding making the Gargoyle a creation of the wizard (to avoid making the wizard "godlike"), removing the Princess from the backstory (to avoid a connection with the modern ally), and making the Gargoyle a human under a spell.
- 319. Mike responds to the guru... [27] - 1/11/92. Staff assistant Mike Ryan's response to Tad Stones. Mike agrees that the Princess is unnecessary and that the romance should be more central.
- 320. More Tad e-mails... [28] - 1/10/92. A brief email exchange between Tad Stones and Greg Weisman. Once again Tad promotes the romance element of the series, and Greg Weisman responds that the romance "demonic" was too on the nose.
- 321. A species is born (again)... [29] - 1/10/92. A second round of emails between Greg Weisman and Tad Stones. Tad mentions Beauty and the Beast explicitly, although this is in reference to Nick-to-be-Hudson's personality. Tad suggests that Xavier is moving towards the idea of gargoyles as a species, and is considering bringing back other members of the species (as in the comedy development, but seen "through the dramatic prism").
- 322. Name enough... [30] - 1/15/92. Tad Stones' feedback on the latest pitch has created a villain named Cal Scain (by the proto-Talon), and asks for information about "silly villains" like DC's Calman. Greg's response is mostly about DC villains, although an example about Black Canary includes the phrase "Even the badguys can have a committed relationship."
- 323. Enter "The Evil Wizard"... [31] - 1/15/92. A backstory for a villain named the Sculptor, author unknown. Elements survived in Coldstone, as well as Jackal and Hyena (particularly in Jackal's fantasy dream from "The Green").
- 324. Design of... [32] - 1/17/92. Tad Stones gives notes on character design.
- 324. Developments converge... [33] - 1/20/92. The old comedy development begins to be re-incorporated into the show. Demona, Ralph (proto-Hudson), and the proto-Trio are back in the show. The Gargoyle Master is no longer a magical creation, but the leader of a different species.
- 325. "The Gargoyle" still taking form... [34] - 1/24/92. Still trying to figure out the series.

Gargoyles

Michael Reaves, Frank Paur, Laura Pennella, and Greg Weisman hard at work.

- 326. Still trying to find focus... [35] - 1/29/92. Greg Weisman trying to put together a pitch for a series now, again, called "Gargoyles".
- 327. More on villains... [36] - 1/29/92. Fred Schaefer's work on villains continues, including a rejected real name for Catscan and the introduction of Scandal.
- 328. NAMES! [37] - 2/1/92. Circling in on the series names by coming up with lists of the names of the characters. The goal for the Gargoyle-Master's name was something Shakespearean or Mythological. Meanwhile, Gary Kriest was concerned that the name 'Demona' was too on the nose.
- 329. A random thought that went nowhere... [38] - 2/2/92. Greg suggested the possibility of naming all the gargoyles after stones or rocks.
- 330. Still wrestling the pitch... [39] - 2/2/92. Another draft of the pitch. Goliath was still awake for a thousand years, and at the time gargoyles had stone-like skin even when awake.
- 331. Must you name-name everything... [40] - 2/2/92. Schaefer's suggestions for names.
- 332. Still searching for names... [41] - 2/3/92. Tad Stones suggests some names.
- 333. Still searching... [42] - Bob Kline submits his name suggestions.
- 334. Closing in... [43] - Bruce Cranston suggests some names of New York City locations for the first time.
- 335. THE PITCH: Version 4.0 [44] - 2/6/92. The gargoyles are now named, but Goliath was still awake for a thousand years. Elisa's last name is still Reed. The Magus was called Malachite. But they were closing in on the name.
- 336. PITCH 5.0! [45] - 2/7/92. Similar to the previous pitch, but more nuanced.
- 337. Pitch revise "2" [46] - 2/3/92. Goliath was also put to sleep for a thousand years, now.
- 338. ANIMATION TEST [47] - 4/23/92. The show had been picked up by Michael Eisner, but Jeffrey Katzenberg encouraged them to pursue it further. Gary Kriest suggested a five minute animation test that was never made, but this was Greg's first pass on what it would have contained.
- 339. 2nd Animation Test [48] - 4/24/92. Another outline of the never made animation test.
- 340. Another pass at a test... [49] - 5/18/92. A third pass.
- 341. Trying again to sell the thing... [50] - 10/21/92. Preparation to pitch the show to Michael Eisner for a third time but instead of changing the show, they began changed the pitch.
- 342. Still... [51] - 12/4/92. Finally given the green light, they received an outline from a writer which wasn't the series Greg wanted to make, these are his notes trying to address things.
- 114. More archives material... [52] - 12/4/92 to one of the earliest writers to work on the project, about the five-part pilot. All the names seem to have been finalized, except Xanatos is still called Xavier.
- 343. More work on the pilot... [53] - 1/19/93. Creative differences with the first writer continue.
- 344. At work on the pilot... [54] - 1/20/93. Greg starts taking a much stronger hand than a development executive normally would, already moving towards being a producer on the series, Lex and Brooklyn's personalities hadn't switched yet. The Vikings are "marauders", Princess Katharine was a queen, Tom is called Robby, and the Magus was old and slothering.
- 345. Still at work on the pilot... [55] - 1/22/93. Still working with the first writer who felt that the gargoyles turning to stone every night was too limiting. Greg's first order of business was to confirm the rate.
- 346. FOCUS TESTING! [56] - 1/29/93. They modified the pitch again when Disney decided to focus test it with a group of kids.
- 347. My Journey to Oregon... [57] - 3/4/93. Gary Kriest became fascinated with comic books because his sons were collecting, and wanted to pitch the show to Todd McFarlane to see if he would participate. Greg modified the pitch again but nothing came of the meeting.
- 348. NEW WRITER ON PILOT! [58] - March, 1993. After going their separate ways with the first writer, Eric Luke is brought on board, and this document is rehashed for his benefit.
- 349. Just to be sure... [59] - 4/9/93. The final version of the pitch before the start of their own. The sole kept was the gargoyles gliding rather than being able to fly.
- 350. The word from Kenner Toys... [60] - 5/3/93. The meeting with Kenner happened and they expressed their "concerns."
- 351. Back at it... [61] - 5/17/93. Eric Luke had turned in his first draft plot outline and this memo was Greg's response.
- 352. Still honing the pitch... [62] - 6/10/93. Another memo to Bruce Eric Luke as Greg tries to bring the story out to help it shine.
- 353. Xenos again... [63] - 6/25/93. Another xeno bit by Greg for the sake of their own. The xeno kept was the gargoyles gliding rather than being able to fly.
- 354. The word from Kenner Toys... [64] - 8/3/93. The meeting with Kenner happened and they expressed their "concerns."
- 355. Meeting SANTA CLAUS is stressful... [65] - 10/7/93. Kenner sent Greg to a large toy of toys while he goes to the company.
- 356. Ducks in a row... [66] - 7/10/93. Mr. Tokunaga of Walt Disney TV Animation Japan suggests some of his staff to be creative forces for "Gargoyles".
- 357. Back to the pilot... [67] - 7/11/93. Eric Luke turned in another outline for the pilot, it still had the Puck but it also introduced the concept of Gargoyle Eggs.
- 358. An old memo... [68] - 7/16/93. In the outline for the pilot, a corporation named CYBERCORP is referred to and Bruce Cranston suggests they make sure there is no real company by that name.
- 360. Design work memo... [69] - 7/27/93. Greg Weisman's notes on character designs by Walt Disney Japan.
- 361. Another memo to Japan... [70] - 7/26/93. A follow-up memo to the previous one.
- 362. More correspondence with Tokyo... [71] - 8/4/93. Greg expresses confidence in Mr. Tokunaga after viewing the Claw/face episode of Batman: The Animated Series.
- 363. Another design memo... [72] - 8/26/93. Greg's response to more designs from Japan.
- 276. Hudson's newly renamed... [73] - 9/13/93. A Disney Executive had just had a son she named Hudson and asked Greg to rename Hudson.
- 364. Being SANTA CLAUS is stressful... [74] - 10/7/93. Kenner sent Greg to a large toy of toys while he goes to the company.
- 365. Ducks in a row... [75] - 7/10/93. Mr. Tokunaga of Walt Disney TV Animation Japan suggests some of his staff to be creative forces for "Gargoyles".
- 366. Back to the pilot... [76] - 7/11/93. Eric Luke turned in another outline for the pilot, it still had the Puck but it also introduced the concept of Gargoyle Eggs.
- 367. An old memo... [77] - 7/16/93. In the outline for the pilot, a corporation named CYBERCORP is referred to and Bruce Cranston suggests they make sure there is no real company by that name.
- 368. Design work memo... [78] - 7/27/93. Greg Weisman's notes on character designs by Walt Disney Japan.
- 372. Another memo to Japan... [79] - 7/26/93. A follow-up memo to the previous one.
- 374. More correspondence with Tokyo... [80] - 8/4/93. Greg expresses confidence in Mr. Tokunaga after viewing the Claw/face episode of Batman: The Animated Series.
- 375. Another design memo... [81] - 8/26/93. Greg's response to more designs from Japan.
- 276. Hudson's newly renamed... [82] - 9/13/93. A Disney Executive had just had a son she named Hudson and asked Greg to rename Hudson.
- 381. BACK TO THE PILOT! [83] - 9/19/93. Eric Luke turned in a script but it didn't match Greg's vision for the series.

Continuation

Both this series and its spin-offs were initially continued in the Gargoyles comic series produced by Slave Labor Graphics from 2006-2009.

In 2022, new canonical comics will be published by Dynamite Entertainment.

Merchandise

During the show's original run, various licensed items were available for purchase from various companies like Applause, Kenner, Skybox, and even Nestle. The show's first thirteen episodes debuted on VHS from 1995 to 1996, with the latter eight episodes of the first season released on four separate volumes and the five-part pilot released as an 85-minute movie (the latter also saw a release on Laser Disk). A non-canonical series was also released by Marvel Comics in 1995.

After the show's initial run, some of other products have been made available. In addition to the canonical SLG comics, the original series has been released on DVD and sculptures of Goliath have been created by both Electric Tiki and Bowen Designs. Hot Topic has also sold Gargoyles related t-shirts on-and-off since 2008. [83][84][85]

In 2015, Jim's Books announced its intention to release Creestory comics based on the original series. By 2017, the plan was quietly shelved. In 2018, Funko Pop released more than a dozen figures. These included chase variants and key chains.

Following the original series' inclusion to the Disney+ streaming library in November 2019, there has been to a near-continuous line of new products and collectibles available to fans. NECA debuted their own detailed action figures in 2021, NECA's subsidiary, Kidrobot, released Gargoyles Phunny Plushes the same year. Also in 2021, Quantum Mechanix began releasing their own Tergar also released a new board game that fit their shelves, even a new pin. [86] Beast Kingdom released a Goliath figure (and Xanatos) in 2023. Additional figures from Mondo are set to be released. [87]

See Also

- Gargoyles (TV series) at Wikipedia, the Free Encyclopedia

Category: Out-of-universe